

The 7 Bad Habits of Highly Ineffective People: Harness the Power of Constructive Inertia

The world is full of slim, sophisticated, glamorous, famous people. These people are supposed to be perfect. We are supposed to want to be like these people. We too are supposed to want to drive shiny new cars, drink fizzy mineral water and decaffeinated coffee, dine out at good restaurants and only watch cultured movies. But what if we are only human? What if we don't want a make-over or decking in our garden or MDF in our sitting room? Then this is the book to read. It gives you permission to be unsuccessful, to be fat, to eat meat and be happy. It is a book for real people who don't want to have their lips glossed, their legs waxed, their Filofax shined or their car valeted - people who want to be relaxed, unsophisticated and very, very normal.
